

GREEN SHADOW

AGRI-ALLIED PRIVATE LIMITED

SPICES, NUTS & MASALAS

Greenshadow agri allied Pvt. Ltd. Would like to set up one state of the art plants for meeting the ever growing demand. The company procures raw material directly from the centers of produce to maintain uniform taste and quality. The raw material is first cleaned, dried and tested with the help of special machines. It is then carefully grounded into the finished product passing through various stages. Fully automatic machines have been installing for this process.

The very first quality check takes place at the time of procuring raw materials, the next when the materials enter our plants. The raw materials then undergo cleaning, sorting, grading, low-temperature grinding and state-of- the-art packaging, all of which are preceded and followed by stringent quality checks.

Our biggest asset is the trust that millions have reposed in us. It is this trust that drives us to invest in more and more advanced infrastructure so that the promise of quality that we bring to you is in no way compromised.

Greenshadow agri allied Pvt. Ltd has received FSSAI, trademark and ISO certifications. It is this no-compromise attitude towards quality that gives us the confidence to promise you the best and bring you the purest.

TIPS TO TAKE CARE OF YOUR MASALAS

KEEP THEM AWAY FROM HEAT

MOST OF US KEEP OUR SPICES RIGHT ABOVE THE GAS AS IT IS EASY TO ACCESS THE DABBAS FROM THERE. BUT THE HEAT FROM COOKING CAN HARM YOUR SPICES. SO, IT IS BEST TO STORE THEM AWAY FROM HEAT.

KEEP THEM AIRTIGHT

SPICES LOSE THEIR FLAVOUR MORE QUICKLY IF EXPOSED TO AIR, SO WHETHER YOU USE GLASS JARS OR METAL TINS, REMEMBER TO KEEP THEM TIGHTLY CLOSED. AIRLOCK CONTAINERS WORK THE BEST FOR STORING THEM TIGHT.

ADD IN SALT

SALT IS KNOWN TO RELEASE MOLECULES IN THE SPICES THAT HAVE BEEN LOCKED FOR A LONGER TIME. SO, WHENEVER YOU ARE STORING YOUR SPICES, YOU CAN ADD SALT IN THE MIDDLE OF THEM TO KEEP THEM FRESH.

DON'T LET MOISTURE ENTER THE CONTAINERS

MOISTURE CAN ALSO SHORTEN THE SHELF LIFE OF SPICES. NEVER PUT SPICES IN THE FREEZER, AND BEFORE DIPPING MEASURING SPOONS INTO A SPICE OR HERB CONTAINER, MAKE SURE THEY'RE COMPLETELY DRY.

STORE IN A DARK PLACE

SOMETIMES HEAT FROM THE SUNLIGHT CAN ALSO AFFECT THE SPICES. SO IT IS BEST TO KEEP THEM LOCKED IN A DARK PLACE. THAT WAY, THE SPICES WON'T COME IN DIRECT CONTACT WITH THE SUN.

HOW TO STORE SPICES

BUY WHOLE SPICES

Whole spices such as nutmeg maintain their freshness longer than ground ones. If you can, buy one or two whole nutmegs and grate just the amount you need for your recipe.

KEEP COOL

Keep spices and herbs away from heat and direct sunlight. Even a commonly used herb like dried bay leaves should be kept away from the stove.

BUY JUST WHAT YOU NEED

Try to resist buying giant quantities of spices at a big box store; they'll probably go stale before you can use them all up. That said, some spices and dried herbs will keep for a long time if you store them properly. Whole spices can last four years. Ground spices like mustard can last for two to three years and contribute to hundreds of tasty homemade salad dressings. Herbs last anywhere from one to three years, depending on the herb.

SPICES DON'T LAST FOREVER

They don't spoil, but spices and herbs do lose their strength. Old and weak seasonings will not deliver the taste that they should. If you don't want to end up with flavorless ham just because your cloves lost their power, give them the sniff test before you use them.

TEST FOR STRENGTH

You don't need any special instrument to test whether spices are fresh. Just use your senses. If the color of the spices has faded, their flavor probably has too. Taste and smell your spices and herbs: If a strong spice like garam masala doesn't tickle your nose and tantalize your tongue, replace it.

KEEP DRY

Don't sprinkle spices and herbs directly from the bottle over a steaming pot. Steam can sneak into the spice bottle and sap your spices' power. If you're wondering why ground spices like allspice get hard and caked in the bottle, steam may be the culprit.

MEASURE CORRECTLY

Make sure your measuring spoon is completely dry when you dip it into the bottle. The moisture can quickly ruin the flavor of an aromatic spice like cinnamon. And do level off after you scoop.

SOME LIKE TO CHILL

Members of the red pepper family, including paprika and chili powder, keep their color and stay fresher when stored in the refrigerator.

LOCK IT DOWN

Replace bottle lids tightly immediately after use to keep out moisture and lock in the flavor you want from a highly aromatic spice like fennel seeds.

THE DAILY GRIND

An inexpensive coffee grinder can also be used to grind whole seeds, cloves, and cinnamon sticks. Fresh-ground spices are especially flavorful. Just be sure to clean it thoroughly afterward so you don't get your flavors crossed.
